

TWINT fills the vacant position of Chief Information Officer

Simon Wehrli is the new TWINT CIO

As of 1 May 2021, Simon Wehrli will take on the position of Chief Information Officer at TWINT and thus also become a new member of the Core Executive Board.

Simon Wehrli has already held the position of CIO on an interim basis over the past months and provided important impetus to ensuring the future success of TWINT AG in the process. As of 1 May 2021, he has now been promoted to the position of Chief Information Officer by the Board of Directors.

The qualified computer scientist started his journey at TWINT in 2017 as a software architect. Since 2019, he has been responsible for the areas of architecture and technology in the roles Chief Technology Officer and Deputy CIO. He previously worked as a freelancer in the development of mobile apps and also counted major companies from the financial sector among his customers. He holds a Bachelor of Science in Computer Science.

“In Simon Wehrli, we are delighted to have found a proven expert from within our own ranks for this key position,” says Søren Mose, Chairman of the Board of Directors of TWINT AG. Markus Kilb, CEO, adds: “With his entrepreneurial spirit, his technical experience and his solution-oriented approach, he is the ideal person for this role.”

Simon Wehrli will thus assume responsibility for TWINT AG’s entire IT division and, together with his team, make a significant contribution to the continued success of the TWINT app. The Core Executive Board of TWINT AG now comprises Markus Kilb (Chief Executive Officer), Anton Stadelmann (Chief Customer Officer, Deputy CEO) and Simon Wehrli (Chief Information Officer).
